Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to 100 guests at the beautiful Algood country home.

A quiet yet beautifully appointed wedding of interest was that of Miss Sara Frances Thomas to Lieut. Edgar Huell Lawman, of Charlottesville, Va., which took place this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Thomas, on the corner of Main and Second streets.

Mr. J. W. Bachman was the officiating minister and used the full ring ceremony.

The entire lower floor of the home was decorated with quantities of white flowers, ivy and palms. Robert W. Taylor, of Camp Greenleaf, violinist, and Miss Kate Pearl Jones, at the piano, rendered the nuptial music. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played as the bride party entered, and during the ceremony "To a Wild Rose," by McDowell, was softly rendered. The vows were pledged while the couple stood in the large French doorway dividing the double parlors. Tall palms and ferns were placed about and the doorway was outlined with southern smilax, the same as the stairway.

Little Misses Loretta and Cornelia Haley led the bride party as flower girls. They carried baskets of pink sweetpeas and wore dainty frocks of white. Miss Loretta Thomas, only sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a beautiful dress of pink Georgette and a large white hat. Her arm bouquet was of pink sweetpeas.

Shawl Draped Sash Fashion

(By Betty Brown.)
Whoever would make over or combine two dresses of a former season, or whoever would give a 1918 look to a last year's frock may like this odd arrangement of black satin. A full width is used over one shoulder in shawl effect while the wide looped panel suggests a sash. The dress is of lace, but the black satin drapery could be applied to a frock of almost any sheer figured material.

BACK FROM GRIM SOLITUDE OF PRISON WALLS, FRANK NABORS TELLS STORY

Sees Wide Difference in Chattanooga Since Prohibition Has Stamped Out Its Dives — Happiness and Cleanliness Reigns Where Sorrow and Squalor Prevailed.

"I wouldn't touch a drop of whisky for all the wealth in the world, and I only wish the people of Hamilton county could see, as I do, the good that prohibition has done in this county." This is the sober declaration of Frank Nabors, who knows, as probably few do, the death and destruction that whisky leaves in its blazing trail.

Nabors has just returned from the state penitentiary, where he spent twelve years and seven months for a double crime he committed while his brain was so benumbed with whisky that he has never been able to remember the details of the tragedy. Nabors was sentenced to life, but lately Governor Rye pardoned him, and he has returned to Chattanooga, where he has a responsible position at a trade he learned while in the state penitentiary.

The pardoned man was found last night at the county jail, where he had gone to see his old friend, Charley Baker, a man who probably did more for him in an effort to get him free than any other man. Baker is the man, who, when Nabors was convicted, took him to the penitentiary, but knowing that it was only a mistake in a weak man's life, never desisted in his efforts to get Nabors free, and now that he has been successful in his efforts Nabors never fails, when he has the opportunity, to wander to the jail to see his faithful friend. Nabors is somewhat reticent about talking about his former troubles and says he has come back to his home and his family to live the life of an upright, honest man. However, last night, in talking of the changes in Chattanooga since he had left, he said, "It's wonderful what prohibition has done for this town. Down in South Chattanooga, before the awful night of which I remember nothing when I committed a double crime for which I have paid the penalty, there was once sorrow, sadness and poverty in homes, where now there is nothing but sunshine and laughter.

Little children are happier, better dressed and more healthy than they were twelve years ago. I noticed on last Sunday a throng of merry children toddling along the streets on their way to Sunday school, and they were all laughing and apparently just as happy as could be. But, way back yonder, I remember I saw but few children on their way to church and those few had only on just the necessary clothes. The houses down in South Chattanooga, and in fact, everywhere, look newer, and there is something about them and the surroundings that just smell prohibition. It's just indescribable the change that has occurred."

Frank Nabors committed a crime which every citizen in Hamilton county remembers. He murdered his sister, his brother-in-law and desperately wounded his sister-in-law. The triple tragedy occurred in "Death's alley," in South Chattanooga, where the family lived. Nabors, some time before the killing, had his leg so badly hurt in a railroad accident that he was forced to have it amputated. For the accident he received as damages a neat sum of money. Up until this time he was an expert mechanic, but gave up this occupation for a life of riotous living. The saloon was his home by day and by night, and on the night he committed the double murder, he planned it in the back end of a bar room in South Chattanooga, where he and his brother-in-law were over-indulging. They left the little saloon and went home, where Nabors, mauling, tried, attempted to kill everybody in sight. He was, of course, arrested and tried and his plea was insanity. He remembered nothing of over having murdered his kinsmen and so told his lawyer, Frank Carden, who began his legal career with the representation of Nabors. It was Mr. Carden's speech that saved Nabors from the gallows. But now he has paid the penalty and has returned to his home and asks his friends to forgive and forget and help him live down, as much as possible, the double crime for which whisky was solely responsible.

BETTER PHONE SERVICE PROMISED BY OFFICIAL

Intimation, However, That With Improvement Will Come Request for Higher Rates.

About an hour and a half of the session at the city commission meeting Tuesday was taken up with hearing the statement of Vice-President Hoxsey, of the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph company, regarding the reason for bad telephone conditions in Chattanooga.

He was brought here in answer to a resolution introduced by Commissioner Bass at a previous meeting that would reduce the rates commensurate with the service rendered. His talk was taken up principally with explaining the whys of Chattanooga's bad service, but much significance is attached to one remark he made after outlining the higher cost conditions

A Hero of the Humbler Kind

Let others richer stories tell. Of heroes of the plain: The brave men who in battle fell, Now buried with the slain. But let me tell a story too, Of a peculiar kind— A man who feels and dares to do, The dictates of his mind.

John and his bay horse are friends Who face the world alone; Whatever proceeds Fortune sends. John claims not for his own; But shares the money that he earns With "Star"—for he's his chum.— Even selfishness with beasts he spurns. Although these friends are dumb.

With old "Star" sick and business dull, John's harvest hopes have fled; With naught to buy and naught to pull, "Star" surely must be fed! "So," says he, "it shall be this way: The cart, I'll change, though crude, And hitch myself up to the dray— This month he earns them food."

Wouldst thou give me a kingdom? Nay—

Crave I a richer gift: That I may love and lift. Though speechless are these friends of mine, When conscience speaks to me, May I full mercy there assign, Though humble it may be. —Robert Sparks Walker.

under which the concern is operating. "We must feel our way in these times," said Mr. Hoxsey, "and if the burden gets too great, we must come to you for an increase in rates. We realize that we couldn't place such a request under present conditions with the service such as it is. Consequently we will better it."

His statement of the increased costs of material that confronts the public service corporation everywhere was a very alarming one. He went into some detail to show the actual conditions, leaving the conclusion with his hearers that the company is not operating at a profit. The difficulty in securing materials lies to a large extent in the immense shipments of them to the American army in France, which, with the slack-up on production due to a labor shortage, is responsible for inferior equipment at many places, he said.

Promises Better Service.

Coming down to the conditions locally, he admitted that the principal trouble was not caused by inferior equipment, but declared that this will soon be alleviated.

In conclusion he made a specific promise to the commission that Chattanooga will receive better service, pointing out that it has been improving for a good while. From the general tone of his speech, it was gathered that within a few months an appeal for higher rates will be made.

ROLLER COASTER PROVES POPULAR AT WARNER

The roller coaster at Warner park is not losing popularity, judging by the figures turned in to Commissioner Heron's office. Gross receipts of $4,441 were collected from the immense crowds that thronged the popular amusement feature last week, and of this amount the city gets 10 per cent, or $441. Although the amount spent on its construction was greater than anticipated, totaling $20,000, at the rate receipts came in last week the entire structure will be paid for in five weeks.

ABYSSINIAN PRIEST ADDRESSES NEGROES

Educator Among Colored Race Delivers Address on "The Future of Democracy."

Tuesday night, at the Presbyterian church on Fourth and Leonard streets, Dr. Checizali, the Abyssinian priest, educator and preacher among the race of color, delivered his famous lecture on "The Future Democracy," to an attentive audience.

Dr. Checizali's aim is to set the position of the black man before the world, and his sympathies for democratic truths to impress and clarify. He has been creating patriotic fervor among the negroes, and his messages are well received, although the flow of language is at times far above the comprehensive grasp of his auditors.

MAKING TRENCH HERE MARINES TO FIGHT IN

"Tuf Stuff" is the name given the dungarees made for the marines by the Co-Operative Overall company, of this city. This is the proper name, too, because it takes tough stuff for the marines as is shown by the great work they are doing on the front.

This company has grown in less than a year from a small shop containing about twenty-five machines to a plant working about one hundred and ten persons and having well over one hundred machines. Practically all of the work done in this plant is government work. This year 11,500 dozen pairs of dungarees go to the marines. Forty thousand trench uniforms have gone to the army, and thirty thousand more will be finished this month.

The trench uniforms are fitted with pockets in which to carry hand grenades and every feature is designed to meet the conditions of the trenches. The government inspector, A. B. Sweat, who examines every garment before it leaves the factory, said that the work and the working conditions were of the very best, and with the loyalty of the employees, and W. F. Stempier, who take much pride in getting the government work out, they were far ahead of their contract.

JEWISH LEGION FIGHTING FOR CONQUEST PALESTINE

Pittsburgh, June 26.—That the present Jewish legion of 8,000 men, now fighting with the British for the complete conquest of Palestine, is but the nucleus of a force ten times as great which will form the national standing army of the coming Jewish republic was one of the most important points developed today during a session of the Zionist convention here. Every Jew who has enlisted in the legion from the United States has planned to remain in Palestine for the remainder of his life. Dr. A. A. Newman, of Philadelphia, discussed at length plans for the formation of an army.

Gen. Broham White, chief of the British recruiting officers in this country, told the congress that he learned more than 20,000 American Jews are in Egypt on the way to join the legion with Gen. Allenby in the Holy Land.
